The claimed invention aims at establishing connections to and between Internet users including a cellular radio communication network for providing a short message service (SMS), and a server for facilitating the establishment of a telephony Internet connection between a mobile subscriber station and an Internet user. The system uses SMS to transfer, from the mobile to the server information identifying the Internet address for the user. The system transfers also from the server to the mobile information relating to the required connection between the mobile and the Internet.

The following documents were cited in The International Search Report:

D1: WO, A2, 9731498

D2: WO, A1, 9713382

D1 shows a data transmission system using a mobile telephone. The data transmission system dials a previously defined target number, which is dialled by a mobile station, which is directed to an intelligent network centre. The target number is decoded into data, which are sent to a company data system during the connection. The system transmits an acknowledgement during the connection as a voice message or as a GSM short message in a text format. The acknowledgement is sent either to the mobile station or to a desired pager unit. The intelligent network centre preferably uses the caller identification number to check whether the caller is entitled to use the service and also to check to which information system of which company the data has been sent.

Supplemental Box

(To be used when the space in any of the preceding boxes is not sufficient)

Continuation of: V.

D2 relates to a communication provision method especially to telecommunications terminal.

The method involves receiving a request for a page of data from a data terminal, which is connected to a data network at a data service node of the network. The request specifies at least one particular telecommunications terminal. A terminal status request is then sent from the data service node to a communications system which serves the particular telecommunications terminal. The terminal status request specifies the particular telecommunications terminal. A terminal status message containing information indicating a current status of the particular telecommunications terminal is received from the communications system at the data service node. A page of data indicating the current status of the particular telecommunications terminal is sent from the data servicing node to the data terminal. Upon selection of the icon, a communications request specifying the particular telecommunications terminal is received at the data service node. A communications origination request to originate communications between the particular telecommunications terminal and the other telecommunications terminal is sent from the data service node to the communications system.

None of the above-mentioned discloses the special technical features of the invention, i.e. to enable a GSM subscriber to, make an Internet telephone call to an Internet user using SMS to transfer address information for an Internet user.

(54) Title: COMMUNICATION SYSTEM INCLUDING MEANS FOR TRANSMITTING INTERNET ADDRESSES VIA SMS

(57) Abstract

The invention provides a communication system, adapted to establish connections to, and between, Internet users, including a cellular radio communication network adapted to provide a short message service (SMS), and a server adapted to facilitate the establishment of a telephony/Internet connection between a mobile subscriber station of said network and an Internet user. SMS is used to transfer, from the mobile subscriber station to the server, information identifying the Internet address for the Internet user and, from the server to the mobile subscriber station, information relating to the required connection between the mobile subscriber station and the Internet user.
